NRHA WINTER MEETING RECAP

The National Reining Horse Association (NRHA) hosted its annual winter meeting in Denton, Texas, February 5–8, 2020. NRHA committees met to discuss plans for 2020 and beyond for the sport.

"The NRHA Board and the committees continue to produce good results for NRHA," said NRHA President Mike Hancock. "Groundbreaking news about the added money for the 2020 NRHA Open and Non Pro Futurities along with the Adequan® North American Affiliate Championships was announced by a new task force. In addition, the judges' ranking system was presented. This is a result of many years of hard work by several people. It's amazing what can be accomplished when we all work together."

The Aged Events Committee reviewed the 2021 rule change proposals and provided its official feedback for the NRHA Board. The committee discussed the 2019 NRHA Futurity and NRHA Derby presented by Markel, including improvements the management team will implement in 2020, which include, but are not limited to, cleaning up traffic in the super barn, managing dogs on the grounds, freestyle performance selection, drags during the go rounds, and the addition of a third steward at each major event. The committee also reviewed the schedules for the 2020 events. allowing the events management team time to work with the Futurity schedule in terms of fluidity. The group covered the Novice Horse Derby conditions and payout structure, recommending the NRHA Board approve the addition of the Novice Horse Open Level (L) 3 and Non Pro L3 to the 2020 NRHA Derby. Also, they'll allow Prime Time Open to include L4 riders at both the NRHA Futurity and NRHA Derby.

Eligibility

The Eligibility Committee met in conjunction with the Non Pro Committee. They discussed, in detail, amateur conditions and recommended their proposed changes to the Executive Committee. The committee also considered the Run for a Million, recommending the NRHA Board place the event in a category they deem appropriate once they receive the official conditions. Last year, the Run for a Million fell in the newly created Category 13.

Judges

Discussions in the Judges Committee meeting began with plans to develop educational videos about specific penalties that may occur and how they are assessed. These videos will be on the NRHA website and social media platforms. The group discussed the official monthly schedule of shows from

Professionals

The Professionals Committee focused much of its discussion on the importance of the 2020 Code of Ethics and how to streamline communication among the committee, NRHA Professionals, and the affiliates. The committee also shared that professionals who are reported to have violated the code of ethics will be brought to the attention of a subcommittee and the NRHA Executive Committee may approve that a violation letter be sent to them. This letter will then become part of their permanent file. The committee also made recommendations for the NRHA Board for which patterns to use at the 2020 NRHA Derby presented by Markel.

Non Pro

The newly created amateur division and the 2020 Run for a Million were discussed during the Non Pro Committee meeting. The group emphasized ways to bring more people to the sport of reining, including opportunities for youth to compete on horses not owned by themselves or their family as a means to accomplish that goal. Programs like Interscholastic Equestrian Association, Intercollegiate Horse Show Association, and the National Collegiate Equestrian Association were identified as potential areas for outreach. The committee also reviewed current non pro conditions and if they should be adapted to allow professional English trainers to show in the non pro, and if so, what levels might be appropriate. The committee discussed the NRHA Non Pro Futurity Consolation structure in regard to the needs of the horses and exhibitors competing at the event.

Stewards

The Stewards Committee discussed developing Emergency Preparedness Guidelines to assist NRHA-approved events in avoiding equine disease outbreaks and responding in the event of a natural disaster. The group also discussed increasing information and education provided to NRHA members about the steward's program, including the scope of the work and ways stewards can assist members. To help stewards expand skills and knowledge, all NRHA stewards will be encouraged to take online courses in emergency procedures, Safe Sport, etc. The group also explored a plan to increase opportunities for international steward certification.

Youth

- NRHA President

Mike Hancock

The Youth Committee focused its attention on NRHyA delegates. Primarily, the committee brainstormed ways to enhance the delegate experience and pique interest for more youth to get involved in the program. The committee also discussed ways to entice youth to enter USA Reining and FEI Young Riders classes. The new structure of these classes makes them affordable for show management and participants. The committee also looked into changing the election process for the NRHyA officers.

Along with the committee discussions, several other monumental changes were implemented during the 2020 winter meeting. A task force increased the purse for the NRHA Futurity and Adequan® North American Affiliate Championships (NAAC) in the coming years. The group will also work to improve the format of the event itself. Get the details here.

NRHA will now require North American Affiliate Regional Championships (ARCs) to host the 10 & Under Short Stirrup class with awards provided by NRHA. More information on this topic will be available soon.

The NRHA Board moved forward with establishing an Oceana Council for the Oceana Region, which currently consists of Australia, New Zealand, Thailand, and Japan.

The next Board of Directors meeting will be April 27—28, 2020, at NRHA headquarters in Oklahoma City.

NRHA ANNOUNCES JUDGE'S RATING SYSTEM

During the 2020 National Reining Horse Association (NRHA) winter meeting, members learned about a new judge's rating system that will be used on a trial basis during 2020. The rating system aims to serve as a guideline for show management in regard to hiring judges.

The proposed system will rate judges from high to low on the following scale: AAA, AA, and A. The ratings will be generated from seven areas of criteria: years of judging, number of shows judged, number of major events judged, lifetime earnings (LTE), personal conduct, ability as a horseman, and performance at judging schools.

"During my first year as chair of the NRHA Judges Committee, I asked everyone what their number one priority was and they all agreed it was developing a rating system for judges," said Mike McEntire, a lot of A judges that get their card but don't get any work. former Judges Committee chair and NRHA Professional. "There are several reasons we needed this rating system, but look at the list and use the A and AA judges more. We are one of those is to give show committees a better idea of who also hoping that we can pair our AAA judges with our AA they are hiring."

Many shows already have a preference for who they hire, but what if that pool of candidates got a bit bigger? Higherranking judges—AAA—are typically hired for events such as the National Reining Breeder's Classic (NRBC) or the NRHA Futurity. NRHA hopes the rating system will provide judges with more opportunities to work in the industry.

"The biggest thing we want to do is know who the judges are and track their work better," McEntire added. "With the rating system, we feel like we can do that better and be able to educate the judges. We've had Hopefully, with this program, the show's management can and As to get them more experience."

Since 2020 is a trial period for the rating system, judges will be re-evaluated at the beginning of 2021. For a complete list of judges by rating, visit nrha.com/judges.

QUARTER HORSE NEWS

QUARTER HORSE NEWS RETURNS TO SPONSOR NRBC'S SLIDE STREET JOURNAL

The National Reining Breeders Classic is always making news! Fortunately, Quarter Horse News keeps coming back to sponsor the Slide Street Journal year after year and keep that news going out!

Quarter Horse News has been a longtime supporter of the NRBC, sponsoring the NRBC Victory Party for over a decade, then increasing its support by becoming the sponsor of The Slide Street Journal.

Quarter Horse News Senior Publisher Patty Tiberg is glad to be part of the event. "Through our partnership with NRBC, Quarter Horse News is better able to serve the reining community by keeping competitors and enthusiasts informed on all the news from this premier event."

Emailed periodically year-round, the Slide Street Journal is the voice of the NRBC, with news of the program and the event. During the show, The Slide Street Journal is printed and hand-delivered to the stall area early each morning along with being emailed around the globe in digital form.

The leading source for news in the western performance world, Quarter Horse News is a staple for any serious reining participant or fan for event coverage, profiles and in-depth reporting on issues that impact the industry. For information on Quarter Horse News, visit the website at www. quarterhorsenews.com.

NEW AQHA SERVICE CENTERS

The American Quarter Horse Association is opening additional AQHA Service Centers this spring.

The first AQHA Service Center is set to open on March 9 at Heritage Place Inc. in Oklahoma City. To obtain assistance with AQHA paperwork, customers must schedule an appointment with the AQHA Member Experience Team at each AQHA Service Center. Details on how to set-up an appointment, contact information, office hours and more are available at www.aqha.com/service-centers.

"Expanding our services to AQHA Service Centers provides our team the ability to improve the level of customer service we deliver to our members," said Craig Huffhines, AQHA executive vice president. "Additional locations expand accessibility to our members who would prefer to work with someone from our Member Experience Team in person, but do not have the ability to travel to Amarillo."

Additional AQHA Service Center locations will be announced as locations are confirmed.

Costantini's years of experience a Non Pro, owner, NRHA President and Board member, Committee Member and Chair, donor, NRHA and Reining Horse Foundation past President, visionary have made him a staple in NRHA history and culture and has propelled Markel to an unmatched relationship. Cody continues, "We are thrilled that he chooses to support the NRBC, both personally as an exhibitor and owner and as the leader of the Markel sponsorship team."

National Reining Horse Association's second largest reining. The Markel Insurance Non Pro Draw Party puts Non Pros on center stage at an event with special touches and fun! The wine glasses lined up with numbers on the bottoms make for some fun times while each finalist draws a glass one-by-one to determine their running order. Who will draw the dreaded number 1? Who is in the last drag? Come to the party to find out! Everyone is invited to attend.

Thanks to the creativity and enthusiasm of Markel, there is always something special to remember from the event. From an ultra-elaborate desert display one year to amazing door prizes the next, the fun factor is a key factor of the event.

Markel Director of Western Disciplines and National Reining Horse Association Hall of Fame member, Frank Costantini has been a true NRBC fan and supporter for years and an integral part of the reining industry.

NRBC Secretary-Treasurer Cheryl Magoteaux Cody noted, "Frank's onsite Markel team includes Non Pro reiners Frank said, "Markel is very fortunate to once again host the Non Pro Draw Party. We have been there for a number of years and we always try to come up with new and innovative ideas – so come to the draw party this year to see what we can do to benefit reiners – everyone is invited to enjoy the festivities. Markel and the remarkable board and staff of the NRBC will always put our heads together to create something fun."

Not only does Markel sponsor the Non Pro Draw Party, it also awards the Markel Non Pro Commitment Award annually during the festivities. The announcement is always a surprise with only select NRBC staff and the Markel team knowing the new recipient for 2020.

With a long history of supporting the horse world in general and the reining industry in particular. Markel has insurance to fill all of your needs. For information on Markel Insurance, visit the booth at the NRBC and the website at http://www.horseinsurance.com.

The National Reining Breeders Classic is a stallion enrollment and show begun in 1997 by a far-sighted group of reiners to create a big money event for horses after their futurity year. It succeeded far beyond anyone's expectations and the program has paid out over $22 Million in its history. For information visit nrbc.com.

Great Southwest Equestrian Center in 2019, the National Reining Breeders Classic (NRBC announced a landmark change in the Conditions for its next yearly event. Beginning with the 2020 NRBC, 7-year-old horses will be eligible to compete in the Classic.

In a Board of Directors meeting held last April 25, the decision was made unanimously to include 7-year-olds in the Classic and to change the eligibility age for the Classic Challenge horse to eight and older.

For NRBC President Tom McCutcheon, the decision was based on sound reasoning. "First it gives horses an extra year of eligibility and that is something that we feel our Non Pros especially wanted. It gives real value to those horses."

GREAT SPONSORS + GENEROUS GIFTS

Make it Great to Be an Entry at NRBC

At NRBC we LOVE swag – special gifts and awards that we can give our exhibitors and sponsors. And thanks to three long-standing sponsors Jared Leclair, Jack and Viola Scott, and Zimmerman Performance Horses, everyone gets great collectable gifts just for entering the NRBC!

Thanks to long-time sponsors Jack and Viola Scott, each Classic entry will receive custom collectable carry all bags featuring the name of Magnum Chic Dream, the Scotts' premiere NRHA Hall of Fame and $6 Million stallion. These handy bags are seen at shows throughout the year. Visit MagnumChicDream.com for more information.

Cowboys and cowgirls wear western hats when competing but thanks to Jared Leclair, they can spend the nonarena time in stylish casual get up with the fashion-forward style of NRBC Electric Code ball caps. With lifetime earnings over $200,000, Electric Code has also shown excellence as a sire – now approaching the million-dollar mark. For information go to jaredleclair.com.

Like the in-arena cowboy hats, when riders leave the show pan the buttoned-up shirts come off and they can also be stylish in quality t-shirts sponsored by Zimmerman Performance Horses' stallion Not Ruf At All. Not Ruf At All became the NRHA's highest money earning Stallion winning in excess of $456,500, and also won the industry's most coveted award—the Triple Crown Championship – winning the NRHA Futurity, the NRBC and the NRHA Derby. For information on Not Ruf At All, visit NotRufAtAll.com.

ELEMENTA AND IRHA TEAM UP TO HOST THE NRHA EUROPEAN FUTURITY IN NOVEMBER

Thanks to the new-born partnership between the Italian Reining Horse Association (IRHA) and Maria Cecilia Fiorucci's Elementa, the National Reining Horse Association (NRHA) European Executive Board voted unanimously to run the NRHA European Futurity concurrently with the IRHA/IRHBA/Arcese Futurity & Italian Championship Finals in Cremona on November 20-28.

Due to the spreading of the coronavirus (COVID-19) in Northern Italy, particularly in Cremona where the 2020 NRHA European Futurity was to be held, last month the NRHA European Executive Board decided to postpone the show. In an effort to ensure that the event's rescheduling was handled efficiently, the European Executive Board reviewed potential dates and venues. Roberto Cuoghi, president of the European Council and IRHA, sealed the deal—approved unanimously by the Board—to host the European Futurity in Cremona during the IRHA/IRHBA/Arcese Futurity & Elementa Italian Championship finals thanks to Elementa's generous 200.000euro sponsorship for the Euro Futurity. On top of the NRHA Nomination Program money

(200.000euro subject to change in nominations), the total added money rises to 400.000euro. "In this very difficult situation we are all facing, I took it upon myself to personally visit with Cecilia [Fiorucci] focusing on what is best for our NRHA members and our sport," said NRHA Hall of Fame Inductee Cuoghi. "Our passion is what moves us and this is the result of our passion. I would like to thank NRHA and our European Board for their trust and of course Cecilia for investing in our industry and our programs." Fiorucci's main goal has always been that of promoting the 4-year-old futurities and this is the perfect transition toward the Elementa Masters Circuit, added Cuoghi. The European Futurity will run concurrently with the IRHA 4-year-old Futurity [details to be determined].

This year Elementa will also be the presenting sponsor of the 150.000euro-added IRHA Italian Championship finals. By hosting the NRHA European Futurity, the 2020 IRHA/IRHBA/Arcese Futurity [which includes the 250.000euro-added 3-year-old Futurity] will once again make the headlines by offering a total purse of 800.000euros.

THE ROLLBACK

Take a step back in time with THE ROLLBACK! Beginning in 2020, each issue will feature a bit of reining history through articles WorldWide Slide owner Cheryl Magoteaux Cody has written covering the events, the people, the skills and the art of reining. It's a chance to remember when...

This article featuring Carl McCuistion was printed in the January 1992 issue of Western Horseman.

CARL McCUISTION:

Teaching the Lead Change

This Oklahoma trainer first instills the basics in a young horse.

HE LEAD change is a normal part of Carl McCuistion's schooling process on a young horse, but he never asks a colt to execute one until he has mastered some important basic skills. McCuistion, who with his wife, Karen, operates a training facility in Wilson, Okla., is very specific about how he introduces young horses to this maneuver.

"I want a horse to change leads correctly—making the change behind first, or simultaneously with the front. To have the control to make the horse change in this manner requires that I have a sound set of basics instilled in him.

"I'll know the horse is ready to introduce to lead changes when he is broke enough so that my rein cues control his head. I'll want him to give his head to the side when I pick up on a single rein. He should also not only flex at the poll vertically when I pick up on both reins, he should also back off the bridle. By that, I mean that he should either stop or slow down—not just give his face and keep going at the same speed. A lot of times you see a horse that gives you his face (tucks his nose), but just keeps running through the bridle—and that's a real problem. I want him to back off the bridle (yield to the bit)—and be ready to react with his body when I pick up the reins."

Article and Photographs by Cheryl Magoteaux

The colt should also respond willingly to a cue from the rider to collect himself—to shorten his stride and gather himself up. "This puts him in a position to do just about anything—and I need to be able to collect him to teach him to change leads."

There are different ways to teach collection. McCuistion does it by speeding the horse up, and then slowing him down. "I'll get him going at a fairly fast lope, then smoothly pick up on the reins. If he tries to stop, I squeeze him with my legs. As I hold him steady in front, he'll get slower and collect himself." His momentum drives the horse's hind-quarters under him, which is the basis for collection.

According to Carl, teaching collection in this manner gives the colt enough forward motion while he is learning to collect himself "so you don't have to kick him forward to keep him moving into the bit."

Besides giving to the bit and collecting himself, the horse must also have two other important skills in preparation for learning lead changes. "He should move away from leg pressure in either direction, and he should also know how to pick up and take both leads." There are no shortcuts to teaching a horse to change leads correctly. "Overlooking any of the basic skills can result in the horse being confused," says Carl.

Once a horse has mastered the fundamentals, he is ready to learn an important maneuver that will help prepare him to change leads. This exercise loping a circle on a reverse arc, with the horse's head and rear to the outside of the circle—is the first step in Carl's lead change teaching program.

"Not only does this teach him to move sideways off my leg," explains

Here's a sequence of photos showing Carl making a lead change. First, he's loping across the middle of the arena, in the left lead and in a straight line, with the horse's head tipped slightly to the right. Middle, Carl applies pressure from his left leg to ask for the change to the right lead, and the horse changes. Below, Carl continues loping to the right. As a horse learns to change leads, he will do it more smoothly, without bouncing into the air.

McCuistion, "it also helps him learn to move off the rein." He explains that, for him, the reverse are exercise is a perfect prerequisite to lead changes because it teaches the horse to put his body in the correct position to execute a lead change, "It's almost like I'm teaching him to put himself into a trap. If his head is in position and I change my leg pressure, he has almost no choice but to take the correct lead. Also, with his neck bent, a horse can't push into the bridle against me, and it's easier to keep him collected."

For the reverse are exercise, Carl first has the horse loping comfortably in a normal frame, with his head tipped to the inside (Figure 1). Carl's split reins are crossed over the horse's neck. In a circle to the right, Carl's right hand is lifted, up and back toward his belt buckle. His left hand is low and slightly out and his left calf will be putting just a little pressure on the horse's side, behind the cinch, to hold the hindquarters in.

"As I continue to circle to the right, I will change his position by tipping his head to the outside (to the left)." His left hand lifts and moves back toward his belt buckle to lift the left rein; his right hand moves down low to the horse's neck and slightly out to maintain light pressure with the right rein.

As Carl holds the horse's head in this reverse are position, he uses his left leg to move him to the inside of the circle (away from his leg pressure). As the horse continues to lope, the circle gradually decreases in size.

"Keeping pressure on the right rein is important. The left rein holding the horse's nose out is a steadying rein. The right rein is the leading rein, guiding him into the circle. Not enough pressure on the right rein will cause the horse to try to follow his nose to the outside instead of moving away from the rein and leg to the right and decreasing the circle. Too much pressure can stop him completely.

"Still loping in the circle and maintaining the right lead, I will ask him to arc his rib cage to the outside by reversing my hands. The right rein is picked

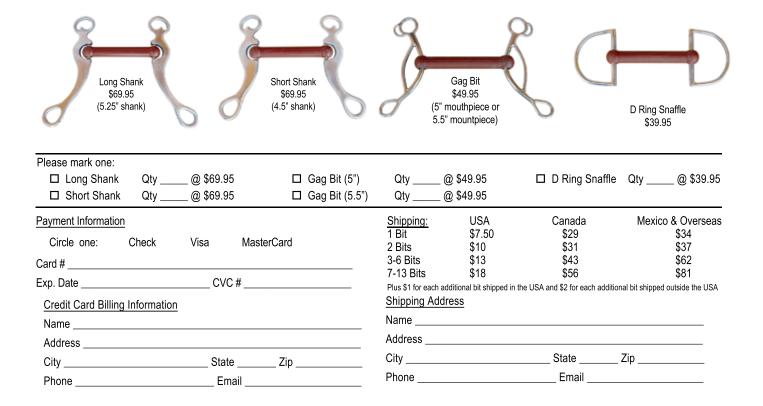

It DOES look different - and it WORKS! You'd be surprised at the people who have a whisper bit in their tack room or trailer. People like

Don't let the name fool you - this bit speaks volumes - and horses just keep winning in the Whisper Bit! Elite riders know that the Whisper Bit communicates clearly to the horse and allows guidance and correction without intimidation. It's forgiving of a rider's mistakes - even when nerves and adrenalin can make hands move a litle too fast.

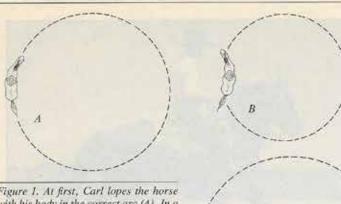

Figure 1. At first, Carl lopes the horse with his body in the correct arc (A). In a circle to the right, this means the nose is tipped to the inside (right), and the rib cage to the outside. In a reverse arc (B), the horse's nose is tipped to the outside, and his rib cage to the inside. Carl uses his left leg to keep the horse in the correct lead (right), and to move him to the inside, gradually making smaller circles. Then Carl repositions the horse in the correct arc (C), and gradually makes larger circles.

to change, or if he's pushing or leaning, you can just go on loping in the circle. out of position.

up and against his neck, with the left rein out as the leading rein to make a larger circle. I'll keep my left leg pressure on him to keep him in the same lead-as my left rein pressure causes him to increase the size of the circle."

In this reverse-arc circle exercise, it is important for the rider to look ahead through the horse's ears. "You can see what the horse is doing and yet see where you're going. Keep your circle and position in mind," Don't lean-on this exercise or later when you start lead changes. Sit up straight in the saddle and drive the horse. Shifting your weight will throw him off balance.

"Throughout the exercise, I'm maintaining the same lead, but I am manipulating the horse's head and body in preparation for the lead changes."

Once the horse is comfortable with the reverse arc, the next step is to actually introduce the lead change.

"I'll do this by loping the horse around the arena in a big circle (Figure 2). If we are going to the left, I'll arc his rib cage to the outside, and tip his nose in to the left. Then when I come straight across the arena, I will tip his face to the right and apply right leg pressure." This puts the horse in a reverse arc.

As he holds the horse in that reverse arc position, the horse lopes across the arena, traveling forward and slightly to the left with his head tipped to the right, moving away from the rider's right leg.

"You're actually still in a circle to the left, so if you're coming across the arena and your horse is not in position

"If the horse is correct, collected, and not pushing into the bridle, and is in posi-

Don't try a change if he's resisting or tion to go the other way, he is ready to ary the lead change. To ask him to change, I will continue to hold his head in that reverse-are position, but I remove the right leg pressure and apply my left leg. That moves his back end over, and he should change leads behind; then with the next stride, change in the front."

From there, Carl continues across the arena, loping in a circle to the right around the arena. "The horse is already arced for the right lead. If his head was right, it's already aimed right where you want it to go.'

McCuistion explains the reason for moving sideways to introduce the lead change. "We do that to control the shoulder and hold it up. We want the horse moving in a straight line when he changes leads. This allows the horse to get the back end to change first. Most missed leads are due to moving the shoulder and head forward and over, which throws the back end out and causes the horse to miss in back."

Sometimes people lean way out over the horse to look down when they change leads. That throws the rider's weight to the front end, putting him off balance. As a result, the horse will usually change leads in front, but not behind. The rider should sit quietly and not move around in the saddle. 5

Once the horse has made the lead change, "As long as he doesn't speed up, I'll just loosen the reins and start him on another circle." If the horse does speed up after the change, Carl takes hold of him and backs him off the bit. He makes him collect himself and respond to the bridle.

"Sometimes the horse speeds up because when the rider changed legs, he really drove him with the outside leg," Carl explains, "That can cause a horse to move faster. Concentrate on maintaining a consistent speed, and keep your cues controlled and distinct, so he understands what you are asking."

If the horse doesn't make the change when you cue him for it, continue around the same circle to the left, get him set up for it, then try it again.

"On the first day, after he makes the change one way, let him catch his air if he's tired, then do it again in the other direction. If he does a good change in each direction, I might only change him twice. Remember, if a horse is really tired, it's harder for him to change leads," Carl points out.

As the horse becomes more adept at interpreting the rider's signals and executing the lead changes, the cues become more refined and subtle. "What we want to do, eventually, is just elevate the reins to collect the horse and straighten his body, then release the outside leg so he changes as your other leg moves into him. The rein pickup is like putting the clutch down. You tell him to hesitate, and collect—then your legs give him the cue for the next move."

One of the most common problems for the horse, at first, is not responding to the rider's leg. This is more likely to happen with a novice rider whose cues are less distinct. Make sure leg signals are clear, by moving your leg slightly back behind the cinch, and applying pressure with the calf of the leg. With legs, as with reins, you have to use enough pressure to get results. If the pressure with the calf doesn't speak loudly enough, then use the heel to ask for the move. If that doesn't work, use a spur.

How light the horse is will dictate the amount of leg pressure needed. "Just lay the leg against the horse's side and squeeze at first. If that doesn't get a response, bump him with your heel—then finally try the spur. Always ask the horse, first, then add pressure if he doesn't respond," Carl advises.

Another problem occurs when the horse stiffens his body, changing in front and not behind. If this happens, he's not moving away from the rider's legs and it's time to go back to the basics. Carl says, "Stop him and limber him up. Get him moving away from your leg pressure at a walk and a trot. Slow down so he can think about it. Once he's working off my legs, I'll try the lead change again."

McCuistion feels it's a mistake to bring the horse down to a trot and make the change if a horse is having problems with the lead change. "When you drop down to a trot and make the change, it becomes a habit and a lot of times the horse will get to thinking that's the only way he can change."

The single biggest mistake made by novice riders, according to Carl, is leaning in the direction they are changing and pulling the reins as they lean. This tips the horse's head to the outside and moves the shoulder in. The result: The lead change takes place in the front, but the rear change possibly won't happen at all.

Another common problem occurs when the horse fails to change and the rider spurs him to reprimand him or try to force him. The horse takes off, and he learns immediately to speed up every time he changes leads.

Some riders are unable to feel which lead the horse is on without looking down at the horse's shoulders. Knowing what lead the horse is on is essential for correctly executing changes, and one of the first steps in learning about lead changes is to study the leads from the ground.

"If you don't know how to tell which lead a horse is on, have someone show you while you watch from the ground. Once you can recognize the leads from the ground, you'll be able to feel them better," Carl points out.

From there, have a ground person tell you what lead you're on until you begin to develop a feel. Practice correct lead departures—take a lead, lope a short ways, then stop, and start again.

It is easier to feel the leads when sitting down in the saddle than it is standing up with more weight in the stirrups. As the horse is loping in the right lead, for example, the rider's right leg will move slightly forward, and the torso will turn ever-so-slightly to the left.

Carl says, "Once you get the feel of the leads, continue to develop your awareness of the horse by sitting down in the saddle and concentrating on how the horse's inside leg feels under you when he is loping." Gradually, this amplified awareness of the horse's movement will increase the timing and accuracy in a variety of maneuvers.

Going too slow or too fast on a horse just learning to change leads is another common mistake. "Some horses literally can't change leads going slow. Others have the ability, but need a lot of assistance from the rider, so you really have to set them up to do it. Then, some talented athletes will change leads regardless of what the rider does. Mc-Cuistion stresses that every horse is different, but adds that a pleasure-horse lope translates to a more difficult change because the horse doesn't have much forward motion. In teaching a young horse, he suggests working at a good, cadenced lope-not too fast or too slow.

How much time should a rider spend on lead changes? "Once a horse learns to change and starts anticipating, I change less," Carl replies. "When I'm schooling a horse, I'll do lead changes a couple or three days, then just work on the building blocks without changing leads every day.

"Think of it this way. You teach the horse to change leads. Then you teach him that you can prevent him from changing leads until you're ready."

In lead changes, Carl teaches the basics. "Then we teach the lead change. After that, we maintain the basics that the lead change is based on. Occasionally we check to see that the horse can do the maneuver and is doing it correctly."

If you drill too much on changing leads, the horse begins to anticipate and starts swapping leads on his own in circles or on the straightaway. One big schooling error that novices make is practicing figure eights. That just teaches anticipation, as well as causing the horse to associate lead changes with a change of direction. Don't be predictable in asking for lead changes—either by asking for it in the same place every time, or by asking for it after only one circle. Instead, vary your routine.

What makes a horse able to execute a good lead change? "A horse that's built with his back legs set up under him can usually change leads easier, and a horse with a shorter back can usually change quicker.

"The biggest factor, though," continues McCuistion, "is the horse's mind. If he can change leads in the pasture, he can change leads with a rider—if he is willing, and understands the cues—and it's the job of the trainer to make sure he does."

Question: I've often heard mention made of Cowboy Turtles Association, the forerunner of the Rodeo Cowboys Association, which is now the Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association. But I've never heard the reason for choosing the name Turtles. Do you know?

Answer: No one seems to know the exact reason why, but there are two versions: 1/ Those cowboys who formed the CTA said, "We were as slow as turtles gettin' organized like this," and 2/ "A turtle never got anywhere without stickin' out his neck,"
