MILLION DOLLAR MILESTONES REACHED DURING 2020 NRBC

The 2020 National Reining Breeders Classic (NRBC) proved to be a pivotal event for riders, owners, and equine athletes. The National Reining Horse Association (NRHA) is pleased to announce that both a rider and owner unofficially crossed the two-million-dollar mark after the dust settled in Tulsa, Oklahoma.

When NRHA Professional Casey Deary scored a 226.5 on Americasnexttopgun (Walla Walla Whiz x Americasnextgunmodel), his four kids cheered extra loud for the "puppy dog" horse affectionately known as Maverick. Winning the

"I knew I was close, but I wasn't exactly sure how close,"

Deary said. "I had three horses that could all potentially win mare. the deal. It wasn't stressful, it was exciting. That's what we all work for at a show. I did the best that I could to get them shown and keep them out of trouble, let them do what they do best, and I just stayed out of their way."

Deary also tied for second with a 224.5 riding Americas Supermodel (Walla Walla Whiz x Americasnextgunmodel). Both scores propelled Deary well over the two-milliondollar mark. His reining career hasn't always been the onetwo punch that it was recently, but this Weatherford, Texas, trainer has seen his fair share of the winner's circle.

"It seemed like it took a lifetime to earn the first million," Deary said. "Americasnextgunmodel was kind of my first elite athlete, not that I didn't have good ones before that, but she got me to the level that I wanted to be at."

By Gunner and out Cee Dun It Do It, Americasnextgunmodel and Deary won the 2012 NRHA Futurity Open L4 Championship together. This talented mare proved herself in the show pen and is now showing her stripes as a brood-

At the 2015 NRHA Futurity, Deary sealed his first NRHA million when he won the Open L4 on Shesouttayourleague (Walla Walla Whiz x Wimpys Little Chic). Deary was again at the reins when this mare became the 2017 NRHA Derby Open L4 Champion.

"The team of people around me is what's made all this possible, with my assistants at home, down to my farrier and vet," Deary said. "And, of course, my wife pulls more than her share of the weight to keep the business going and taking care of the kids. It's certainly a group effort to reach these milestones."

After unloading from Tulsa, Deary took those same three horses to Las Vegas. He again rode Americas Supermodel to a 224.5 to tie with NRHA Five Million Dollar Rider Andrea Fappani for the 2020 High Roller Reining Classic Open L4 Championship.

Every employee who set foot on the Griffin operation heard those words. Not only does Griffin credit the horses for his recent milestone, but he also has an unending list of team members who helped propel the Griffin legacy to this point.

"To say I was gifted at picking a horse would be a huge exaggeration," Griffin said.

"Certain people, like Duane Latimer and Bob Loomis, got us started on this path. I've always had a fondness for quality mares, and I've believed that from the very beginning."

Back in 2007, Griffin became the first NRHA Million Dollar Owner thanks to an unrelenting breeding program he built with his wife, Terry, and their daughter, Samantha Smith. Griffin Quarter Horses dispersed in 2013, but the legacy lives on as Griffin becomes the fourth NRHA Two Million Dollar Owner.

Leading up to the NRBC, Griffin was only $4,000 short of hitting the two-million-dollar mark. His daughter won more than $5,000 in the Non Pro finals between two horses: Drinkin Moonshin (Shine Chic Shine x Wimpy Little Girl) and Neverthoughtiwould (Pale Face Dunnit x Shine Tini).

Something Griffin might not divulge about his success as an owner is that he's played a big part in it as a non pro competitor. He's earned more than $400,000 in NRHA Lifetime Earnings (LTE).

"This isn't a blind man's game, but there's enough luck to it that it plays a part and we took advantage of that luck when we got it," Griffin said. "You get lucky and sometimes you get unlucky."

Griffin found a majority of his luck in his mares. One of those was Pines BH (Great Pine x Ms Enterprise), also known as Shirlys Folly with the American Quarter Horse Association (AQHA). One of her first foals to hit the ground running was The Great Whiz by NRHA Twelve Million Dollar Sire Topsail Whiz.

"I walked into the futurity prospect sale and bought that mare [Pines BH] without knowing anything about her," Griffin said. "Her first foal [The Great Whiz] that I bred and raised out of her won the Open Level 4 at the 2003 NRHA Futurity. Many horses don't work out, but in strange ways, they do. Our biggest reason for success has been consistently trying to have good stock and good help."

Congratulations to Deary and Griffin for joining an elite group of riders and owners!

NUTRENA FEEDS SPONSORS SWRHA OPEN GRAB-AND-GO DINNER

Longtime Southwest Reining Horses Association sponsor Nutrena works has returned as a sponsor of the 2020 event. For the past several years, the Nutrena Draw Party has been a popular and very crowded event. With the recommendations of health officials to avoid close seating, and with the goal of continuing to provide a dinner, the Nutrena Feeds Grab-And Go Dinner was conceived.

The dinner will be held on Saturday evening during the Open Futurity competition.

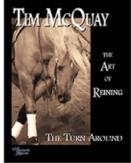

Thanks to Nutrena, a delicious meal prepared by West Catering & Concessions will be served in come and go fashion. Partakers may pick up their meals in the serving line and take them into to the Hardy Murphy Coliseum to enjoy while watching the final sections of the Open Futurity.

"Nutrena Feeds is excited to be a sponsor of the Southwest Reining Horse Association again this year. As we all navigate through this challenging year, we are glad to see our equine athletes and their owners out competing and doing what they love. Your attendance allows us to continue to show up and support Reining events," Nutrena Feeds Senior Field Representative, Kirk Carter said.

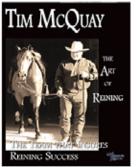

"Whatever age or level of competition your horses are at, Nutrena has a feed to fit your needs. Carefully crafted formulations with minerals, trace minerals, vitamins, and pre & probiotics all help support growing, lactating, and performance horses at every age. Come by our booth to Show Manager Cheryl Cody noted, "We appreciate the Nutrena team and it's gratifying to know that they are loyal to this show, even with some of the challenges!"

"Although we regret that we can't have the regular Draw Party due to Covid-19, we are more than happy to continue our sponsorship through the Grab-And Go Dinner," added Nutrena Account Representative Bubbah Harrison.

Cargill manufactures and markets a complete line of Nutrena brand feeds and supplements that help horses, and all classes of livestock maintain optimal health throughout all stages of life. Using the highest-quality ingredients and the most up-to-date nutritional technology, Cargill is committed to the health, well-being, and safety of its customers' horses, livestock, and pets.

Austrian Reining Maturity 2020: SUCCESSFUL CONCLUSION TO A DIFFICULT SEASON

Helmut Schulz and his team made the seemingly impossible, possible. Despite the coronavirus, he managed to set up a second international reining highlight in Wiener Neustadt: the Austrian Reining Maturity. The second edition of this highly-praised event for 5- to 15-year-old horses had to accept losses in the number of entries and participating nations, but in terms of prize money - $30,000 added - and service, no compromises were made in Wiener Neustadt.

Since spectators were not allowed due to Coronavirus constrainst, the Maturity could be followed via livestream, which worked perfectly, thanks to the installation of a new line. The new Video Wall, which premiered at the Austrian Futurity, was also used here and was enthusiastically received. International interest in the event was huge as usual, evidenced by the 50,000 clicks on Facebook alone.

A total of 84 horses from Germany, Italy, Liechtenstein, Poland, Slovakia and Austria were at the start, which meant a total of 315 entries (excluding Paid Warmups). Many of the usual exhibitors had fallen victim to travel restrictions, but the riders and owners present enjoyed the excellent conditions of the facility all the more, especially since dream weather prevailed through the weekend. Only in the evening it became very cool, so that judges Filippo Masi and James Gerdes Hansen as well as their Scribes wrapped up warmly.

Klaus Lechner wins Maturity Open L4, Pavel Orel the L3 The Maturity L4 Open Championship was claimed by the longtime dream team Klaus Lechner and Cody Rooster Delmaso. The beautiful 15-year-old Cody Rooster Delmaso proved his class again with a 147. Furthermore, the two were Reserve Co-Champions in the L3. The brown son of Ricochet Rooster out of Made of Lacy, owned by Julia Gaupmann Lechner, is the current NRHA Intermediate Open World Champion and was NRHA European Derby Non Pro Levels 1 and 2 Champion, NRHA European Limited Non Pro Champion, 2014 Austrian State Reining Champion, International Senior Reining Open Austrian Champion and Intermediate Austrian Amateur Reining Vice Champion as well as multiple Bronze Trophy Championships.

The Reserve Maturity Champion title in the L4 Open went to NRHA Million Dollar Rider Rudi Kronsteiner who scored a 145 with two horses: Face Time and AB Peppy Diamond - both owned by Jennifer Nixdorf. With AB Peppy Diamond, Kronsteiner also scored a 147 to claim the Open title at this Maturity.

The show high score was achieved by Pavel Orel, who scored a 148 aboard Remy Rooster SG (Remin Whiz x Tea Rooster) thus winning the Maturity L3 Open for owner Vladimir Cejka under challenging conditions - he was chased by a cattle dog; however, he rejected a re-ride, knowing that he couldn't top his score. The 6-year-old Remy Rooster SG, bred by Silvia Gandolfi, was already IRHA Futurity Champion L1 and L2 as well as NRHA European Futurity Champion L1 (both under Wiktoria Stanko).

Klaus Lechner rode two horses to tie for the Co-Reserve L3 Open Championship each scoring a 147: Karoline Wesely's Whizagun and Cody Rooster Delmaso.

L2 Open Maturity Champion: Pavel Orel, Sebastian Eisler tops L1 Open

In the L2 Open, Pavel Orel also took the lead, this time with 5-year-old FB Spooks Giant Dry (Spooks Gotta Gun x Noor Nicdry), bred in Italy and also owned by Vladimir Cejka. The horse and rider team scored a 144.5, relegating Sebastian Eisler with Katharina Greil's JP K Pax to second place (143.5), closely followed by Barbara Bayer and Brigitte Polly's Where Does Rosy Go (143).

This meant the L1 Open Maturity Championship title went to Sebastian Eisler and JP K Pax. The 11-year-old stallion by Got Smokin Chex out of Gallo Del Hollywood was among others ARHA Futurity Open L3 and 2 Finalist and third in L1 and NRHA Breeders Derby Limited Open. Second in the L1 Open was Barbara Bayer and Where Does Rosy Go ahead of Karoline Kirchl and Golden McMuey with a 142.

Maturity Champion Non Pro L4 and 3: Julia Gaupmann-Lechner & Tinseltownsmokingun In the Non Pro, the L4 and L3 Maturity Champion titles went to Julia Gaupmann-Lechner and her Tinseltownsmokingun, who earned a 145.5. The 10-year-old stallion by Colonels Smoking Gun out of Miss Tinseltown has been a winning combination with his owner as well as with her husband Klaus for years. At the 2019 AMERICANA, he won the NRHA Intermediate Open Bronze Trophy as well as the Intermediate Non Pro Trophy. With the sorrel stallion, Julia was the 2017 NRHA European Affiliate Intermediate Non Pro Champion. Julia and Tinseltownsmokingun also won the Non Pro at this Maturity with a 142.

The Reserve Maturity L4 and L3 Championship titles were shared by Anna Lisec with her highly successful This Wimps So Fly and Tina Künstner-Mantl on Mizzfire, who scored 145s. Tina also rode JP Vickie Barcelona to 4th place with a 144.5.

Maturity Champion Non Pro L2 and L1: Anna-Maria Zehetbauer & Big Leo Gun

The L2 and L1 Non Pro was won by Anna-Maria Zehetbauer and her 7-year-old Big Leo Gun (Mr Gun Dee x Mis Sujos Gunsmoke) scoring a 144.5 for herself. The Maturity Reserve Champion was Markus Spreitzhofer on Cant Hide

A Gun after he scored a 142.5. Third place was shared by Barbara Reiter on Norbert Nestelbergers Brownies Chex Whiz and Rudolf Maurer with Tinseltownconnection - both with a 142.

Thus, the difficult 2020 show season came to an end in Wiener Neustadt. Host and show manager Helmut Schulz was happy about an all-around successful Austrian Reining Maturity 2020 - and this, in spite of constantly increasing coronavirus requirements and the uncertainty at the borders as well as the overlap with several other shows. For next year, he intends to further expand the Maturity with a Youth division among other things. The date is set for the penultimate week of September 2021 but will also adapt to the international show calendar.

2020 SWRHA FUTURITY TO OFFER OPEN & NON PRO MARE BONUS AWARDS

The Southwest Reining Horse Association Futurity has long been the show that offers something for everyone. From events like the $133,500-added Futurity to ancillary Ride and Slide classes to the Rein In Cancer Dog Races, the little show at the Hardy Murphy Coliseum in Ardmore, Okla. has an array of activities and benefits. In the past, there has been a $1,000 Mare Bonus to the highest scoring mare in the Open Futurity, but in 2020, the highest scoring mare in the Open, and the top two highest scoring mares in the Non Pro will be rewarded!

Thanks to the support of Toyon Ranch, the Open mare will receive even more than in years past! The Toyon Ranch Open Mare Bonus has increased from the previous $1K to $2,500 to the high scoring mare.

"Toyon Ranch is pleased to join others in sponsoring the SWRHA," said Toyon Ranch owner John Tague. His wife, Nancy Tague added, "The award we are sponsoring, itself, demonstrates our commitment to mare power in the pen and in the breeding barn."

Toyon Ranch has supported various programs and shows within the reining horse industry for several years. The picturesque ranch - located south of Pilot Point, Texas - is owned by John and Nancy Tague. With the goal of bringing the highest-quality reining prospects to the public market, Toyon Ranch focuses on pairing its already proven mare band to the best reining sires in the industry. For more information, follow them on Facebook at https://www.facebook.com/pages/category/Local-Business/Toyon-Ranch-LLC-526533367879984/.

Premier Equine Veterinary Services and Rancho Sereno have been longtime sponsors of the Mare Bonus, and this year, they have returned to provide the highest scoring Non Pro Futurity mare with a $1,000 incentive and the second highest scoring mare with $500.

Lisa Maberry who owns Rancho Sereno with her husband Mike, said "My first reiner was a mare and I fell in love with her and the sport of reining which led to the purchase of our ranch and at least seven more mares. My husband says if you are going to be in the breeding business, you can't just have one; you have to have at least five. Little did he know what was to come! Twenty years later, we have had a great ride breeding reiners. We have foaled out over fifty babies and have been committed to the breeding industry. We love their intelligence and their heart and wanted to support the mares and the people who show them." She continued with, "We are so grateful to live in an area with such talented horse men and women. And fortunate that our local futurity has the top open horses and riders in the world."

Rancho Sereno is located in the heart of horse country between Whitesboro and Callisburg, Texas. The 165-acre ranch emphasizes its superb broodmare band and focuses its breeding program on producing sound, athletic, sane, and versatile offspring. For more information about Rancho Sereno, visit the website at RanchoSereno.com.

Conveniently located on the north side of Highway 82 in Whitesboro, Texas, Premier Equine is led by Dr. William Rhoads. Dr. Rhoads is a successful Non Pro competitor and a huge asset to the performance horse industry. He has limited the scope of his veterinary practice to equine surgery, lameness, and sports medicine to ensure that he can provide premier, cutting edge veterinary care to the equine athlete. Dr. Rhoads regularly attends continuing education seminars so that he can stay abreast of new information and techniques. For more information, visit the website at premierequinevet.com

Since early 2020, NRHA members have been able to use ReinerSuite to access reports, apply for competition licenses, purchase memberships, transfer horses, obtain digital membership cards and competition licenses, and more. Early adoption and usage by members is strong and growing—generating many positive reviews.

Morris-Stone elaborated, "Nominations and memberships are completed as soon as the payment is processed in ReinerSuite, and it is not unusual for an online transfer or new license to be approved and completed, with a digital version emailed, within 24 to 48 hours."

More NRHA members are encouraged to use this online platform, which gives 24/7 access to records and allows them to conduct many transactions outside traditional business hours. Beginning January 1, 2021, NRHA will enact a $10 in-office processing fee for items not completed through ReinerSuite by the member. The fax option will be discon-

"This in-office processing fee is similar to the fee we have charged for years for North American nominations that have not been completed online," said Morris-Stone. "In turn, NRHA will drop the $30 show rush for submitting licenses at shows so the $10 fee will apply to anything sent to us to be processed by hand in the NRHA office." Rush fees now include the $10 handling fee.

NRHA will continue to offer free digital membership cards and competition licenses, and the NRHA Handbook is available online. Hard copies of cards, licenses or handbooks will be available for $5 each.

2020 NRCHA WORLD SHOW QUALIFICATION

The 2020 National Reined Cow Horse Association horse show season has been anything but typical due to the fact that affiliate groups, show producers and exhibitors have all had to navigate coronavirus related uncertainties. After carefully evaluating the unique trials faced by competitors in NRCHA's eight regions this year, the NRCHA Board of Directors has instituted modified World Show qualification requirements for the 2020 show season. While the show season will end as it typically does on November 15, two major standards to compete in Fort Worth at the NRCHA Celebration of Champions February 11-20, 2021 at Will Rogers Memorial Center have been waived. The "top twenty" and "in the same region" requirements are not applicable this year.

"If one thing is certain in 2020 it's that our members are excited about showing and anxious to pursue their goals," said NRCHA President Corey Cushing. "It's probably more important now than ever that the NRCHA remain committed to ensuring the best show experience possible despite these trying times. I think I speak for all of us when I say we can't wait to cheer each other on at the Celebration of Champions in February."

The Celebration of Champions is scheduled to take place at the iconic Will Rogers Memorial Center where NRCHA World and National standings will be awarded the same as in previous years. The association's first premier event of the year will include the highly anticipated World's Greatest Horseman, World's Greatest Youth Horseman, Tres Osos Cow Horse Derby and World Championship classes.

Going into its 18th year in 2021, the NRCHA Celebration of Champions is three shows rolled into 10 days of competition. The World Championship portion of the Celebration of Champions marks the official conclusion of the 2020 season by determining World and National Champions in 15 different Open and Non Pro divisions. The World Championship contestants will show in a preliminary round, with the top 10 in each division advancing to a clean-slate finals for a shot at the title.

Just as fall represents the culmination of futurity season, so too will the regular horse show season wind down. If you have not secured your qualification to compete at the NRCHA Celebration of Champions, take the opportunity to review this year's modified parameters so you can be among those making the trip to Fort Worth for NRCHA premier event action at its finest.

The 2020 Open and Non Pro class qualification parameters are as follows: 1) Compete at least three times in a given class in at least three NRCHA-approved shows in any region, and 2) Earn at least 1/2 point; OR be a Finalist at the AQHA or APHA World Shows.

The 2020 Youth classes qualification parameters have not changed, but are as follows: 1) Compete at least three times in a given class in at least three NRCHA-approved shows in any region; OR be a Finalist at the AQHA or APHA World Shows.

Members are encouraged to contact the NRCHA staff with any questions or clarification regarding eligibility. The Celebration of Champions is a do-not-miss event!

All horses can stop, but trainer Scott McCutcheon's horses have to excel in a world of big-time reining horses By CHERYL MAGOTEAUX • Photography by DARRELL DODDS

A ll horses can stop," Scott McCutcheon says. "How hard and how well they stop depends on the individual."

McCutcheon should know. He is one of the most successful reining trainers in the industry. His string of titles includes World, Futurity and Derby Champions in NRHA, AQHA and APHA competition.

The horses that excel in McCutcheon's world have to be big-time stoppers.

"In degree of importance of maneuvers, the stop is it!" said the trainer. "Until I became a judge I didn't realize how many horses are comparable until it comes to the stop. The stop is the most exciting part of the reining pattern and is always the favorite with the crowd."

Because the stop is such a critical component of a winning run in today's ultra-competitive reining world, McCutcheon chooses his reining prospects based largely on his assessment of their stopping potential. His selection process for unridden long yearlings and early 2-year-olds is based 90 percent on pedigree.

"You get some individuals from time to time that are not bred to stop and still do, but for the most part, breeding runs true," McCutcheon explained. "Knowing that, if I want to increase my chances of having a fancy stopper, I'm going to select a horse that comes from a family of great stoppers."

There are two attributes a horse must have to excel in the stop—great physical ability and a great mind. A horse has to be an athlete to stop correctly, to put his back legs up under him and support his weight as he forces his back legs through the dirt in a 25- or 30foot slide.

"Stopping takes a tremendous amount of strength," said McCutcheon. "It's strenuous and exhausting work, even though it looks smooth and easy from the stands."

In addition to that physical ability, the horse has to want to stop.

"A horse with a willing mind is always going to stop, in good ground or bad, when it's physically demanding or easy," the trainer said. "His attitude ensures that he'll try his best.

"If an individual has all the ability in the world but doesn't want to work, he's not going to stop. You see horses that are not built to stop, don't have the strength, but they go ahead and do it anyway. The problem here is that stopping hurts them so much that finally their physical shortcomings overcome their great mind and they can't take it any more.

"That's why you've got to have both—the great mind and the athletic ability—for the horse to excel over the long run."

McCutcheon is quick to acknowledge that not every horse has to stop like a world-class reiner, but the principles and methods used in his program can be used to create the softness and willingness to correctly stop at whatever level is desired.

Starting Young Reiners Early

In McCutcheon's program, teaching the "whoa" begins early. When 2-year-olds are started on the Mc-Cutcheon ranch, they are ridden only 10 to 15 minutes at a time. The trainer walks and trots the horse, keeping it moving forward until it is time to quit.

At the end of the session, McCutcheon says "whoa" and sits down in the saddle as he picks up on one rein. To do this, he bends his elbow, pulls up and back, bringing the horse's nose around and up and keeping its shoulder elevated. He holds that pressure steady (not increasing and not releasing) and continues to say "whoa" until the horse stops.

As soon as the horse stops, McCutcheon releases the pressure then dismounts. The session is over for the day.

"If I'm circling to the right, I'll use the right rein. To the left, I'll use the left rein," McCutcheon said. "I don't ever pull on both reins at this point, because it's natural for a horse to pull back against you if you pull with two reins. He'll learn to give to the pressure from one rein though, and won't learn to pull back."

This method of applying pressure from only one side also helps keep the colt from developing a hard mouth.

At the beginning of training, the horse will just walk in circles, finally slowing to a stop. But after about three days he learns that "whoa" means it's time to quit, and he'll begin to stop as soon as he feels the pressure of the rein and hears the spoken cue.

The horse also begins to respond to the rider's body position.

"Right before I ask for the stop, I'll actually lean forward, say 'whoa,' and then sit down," McCutcheon said. "That extra emphasis helps warn the horse and lets him prepare himself. As I sit down, I want to stay balanced—to push my heels down, drawing my weight through my back and seat. As I do this, I'll keep my chin up to keep from rounding out my back too much."

The rider must react quickly to the horse's response.

In early training, the cue for stopping is given by picking up on only one rein. In the top left photo, McCutcheon picks up on the inside rein and asks the filly to give her head. When the filly turns slightly, then stops, she is rewarded by the release of pressure.

"It's important to release the pressure just as soon as you feel the colt is going to stop," the trainer said. "That's his reward for doing the right thing.

"At first, the only time we ever ask the colt to stop is when we're finished with that horse for the day and are ready to quit."

Because the stop signals the end of the workout, stopping is something the horse wants to do. This easy-to-understand approach has quick results.

"I can recognize early on the ones who want to stop," McCutcheon said. "They catch on quickly, and you'll feel them. They won't slide, but their weight will shift to the rear end and their hind legs will start to come up under them. "

McCutcheon continues to ask for the stop in this way for about a month. Then he begins a subtle change in his method, although it still takes place only once a day—at the end of the session—and is still followed by the rider's dismount.

The Second Step

In the second and third month of training, McCutcheon begins to cue for the whoa with pressure straight back from both reins. He also begins to keep his body position stable, no longer leaning forward before the whoa, because the horse no longer needs that extra warning to prepare.

McCutcheon still says "whoa" and shifts his weight down, giving the horse an instant to react before the trainer puts pressure on both reins straight back.

As he pulls back, he shifts the pressure lightly from rein to rein using a slight see-saw motion to keep the horse from leaning against them. As before, as soon as the horse stops the pressure is released and the rider dismounts.

During the initial 90-day training period, the horse is schooled on skills other than the stop. One of his first and most essential lessons is to learn to give his head to pressure, or pull, from side to side Gradually getting "softer," when the rider picks up the right rein, for example, the horse will softly move his head to the right with no resistance.

Gradually, less and less pressure is required to get the colt to bend from side to side.

Once this is mastered, it is easy for him to learn to give his head—to break in the poll—when he feels pressure with both reins in that slight see sawing or rocking motion.

By the end of 90 days, the horse is soft from side to side, and knows that pressure pulling back is a cue to tuck his head and give to pressure rather than resist.

The "green" horse is given an additional aid in learning to stop in that McCutcheon initially stops his young horse at the same place each lesson. Eventually, the horse expects to stop at that location. Later, a more mature horse will stop willingly anywhere.

Learning the Cues

In the fourth through sixth month of training, the young horse is asked to stop from four to 10 times in a day's session.

"If I make four stops and they are all nice, I won't ask for more," said McCutcheon. "If not, we'll try again, up to about 10 times."

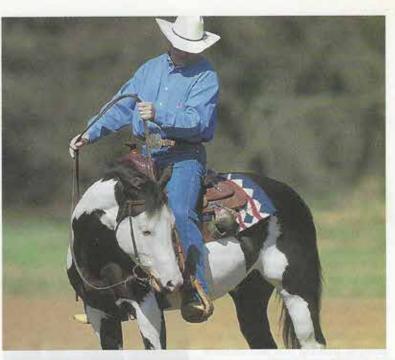

At the beginning of training, a young horse takes hold of the bridle for balance. As training progresses, he learns to balance himself without that rein pressure. He becomes soft in the poll, and will stop at the sound of the word "whoa" and a slight pull. This pull gradually gets lighter until the cue becomes mostly body movement and voice.

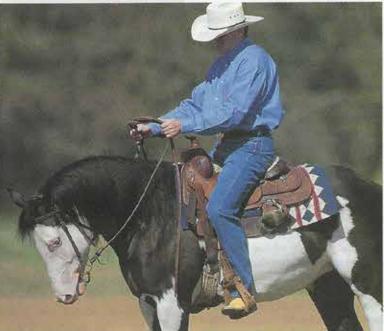

As he learns to break in the poll and give to the pull, putting less and less pressure against the bit, the horse also learns to balance in the stop on his own.

Training for Consistency

In the fifth through seventh month of training, the colt learns to complete a relaxed stop from a hand gallop, and is able to slide about 10 feet on good ground.

At this point, McCutcheon looks for consistency.

Top: Early training teaches the horse to give to lateral puil. Bottom: Once the horse gives side to side, one rein at a time, it is easy for the horse to learn to give at the poll from pressure on both reins.

"I won't quit with just one good stop," the trainer explained. "I want three or four good ones. A reining pattern will have that many stops, and the colt needs to give me that many before he quits."

McCutcheon now looks for responses that may indicate a problem. "One of the common things we'll see at this point is when I say 'whoa' the colt hits the ground with both hind feet and slides about a foot, then comes out of that and hits again and slides pretty good," he said.

"Some horses won't hold that [sliding] position because it's so physically demanding, Others have the physical ability, but not the mental discipline.

"Either way, I won't punish the horse but I'll do another stop immediately. I won't increase the speed and won't say 'whoa' any differently, but I will pull a little harder with both hands. Usually that reminds a horse that he needs to concentrate or work harder.

"If he's real inconsistent at this point, I'll begin to think maybe he's not going to make a reiner because this is the stage of training where stopping becomes more difficult," McCutcheon continued. "If a horse has a physical weakness now, we'll start to see the effect of it because this is when stopping becomes really physically demanding."

Often, a horse will open its mouth during a stop. It is at this point in training that McCutcheon works with that problem.

"Remember, no horse will open his mouth in the stops unless you pull him, but if he does seem to have this tendency, I'll work him with a dropped noseband or cavesson to help him remember to keep his mouth closed," said the trainer.

Sometimes at this stage of training, a horse will go to the ground well but is rigid in his head and neck.

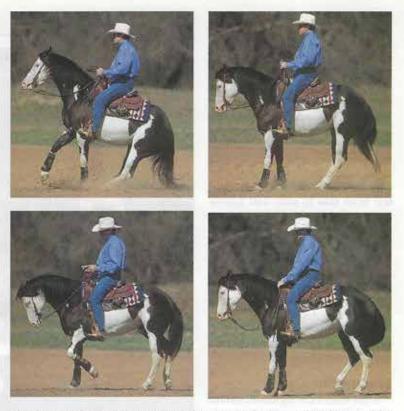

"Even though he goes to the ground and stops, he still pushes his head and neck out for balance," explained McCutcheon. "At the end of the stop I'll probably hold this horse still and make him soften his chin. I won't release the pressure on the reins after the stop until he softens up and tucks his chin.

"This reminds him that he's supposed to stay soft and maintain this posture throughout the stop. If that doesn't help, I'll back him up with his chin under for a little more reinforcement."

Ability Becomes Apparent

Some horses stop on the front end, something McCutcheon said is difficult to correct.

"Some horses just naturally stop on their front end," said the trainer. "In our program, we don't try to fix this type of horse because they usually won't make reiners.

To emphasize softness in the young horse after a stop, McCutcheon will ask him to tuck his chin or take a few steps back before releasing him.

"For our purposes, if we get these horses to a show and they get nervous, their first instinct is to revert. But they can be improved if they're headed to other events."

Another problem McCutcheon sometimes spots at this time is the horse that points its rear toes into the ground, so they dig in instead of sliding. Sometimes this type of horse can be helped with shoeing, but if they are shown at a reining where the ground is deep, they generally revert to digging their toes in.

McCutcheon added that some horses have this problem due to incorrect shoeing. If this is the case, correct shoeing may help.

"From the fifth to ninth month of training, the ability of the horse to stop becomes readily apparent," McCutcheon continued. "At this point, some horses will not progress and I don't really know why. Does it hurt? Does the horse not understand?

"If a horse is not going to be a big stopper and he gets to this point, at least he will be a better horse for whatever event he is used for."

Adding Speed

In the eighth through 12th month of riding, McCutcheon begins asking for more speed to the stop.

"I'll also ask them to be more independent—less reliant on the bridle," said the trainer. "The workout length is about 45 minutes. All the stopping is still usually toward the end of the workout.

"I'll do a lot of bending and flexing at the first part of the workout to supple the neck and shoulders. I need them to be relaxed in the stop. I cue for the whoa the same, but I'm working toward less rein pressure, asking the colt through repetition to get to the point that he stops with less and less pick-up on the reins."

McCutcheon continues to carefully control the training schedule and the number of stops a horse is asked to do.

"I'll ask my horses to stop every other day," he said. "About three times a week we have 'stop days,' and on those days we'll do four to 10 stops."

McCutcheon's experience in high school and college football helped him develop his own ideas on scheduling stopping exercises.

"When I was in training, we'd have days of very strenuous activity, then a day off to let our bodies and muscles recover," McCutcheon said. "I do the same for my horses. I feel that letting them have a day off from stopping lessens my chances of injuries because I'm never riding a horse that's sore from the last workout.

"Even if my horse is having problems, I still try to not do more than 10 stops a day. If my horse is having trouble, I'll try to have that problem corrected by the time I've done 10 stops. I stay aware of how physical stopping is, and don't tire them out."

Polishing the ### Finished Product

At 10 to 12 months of riding, the young horse starts to have the look of a finished reiner.

"I'm using good speed and sliding 20 to 25 feet with the horse relaxed," said McCutcheon.

"If they've gotten to this level, most will make reining horses, but the ones who can handle this increased speed and increased pressure will likely make horses suitable for Open competition."

From this point on, McCutcheon's goal is fine-tuning the stop.

"Now training is pretty much over and we're just polishing," he said. "The horse knows how light he needs to be. He understands that his job is to stop on 'whoa' and go to the ground."

McCutcheon's methods for preparing a horse to show are well defined.

"I don't practice stopping with one hand, although I will do it some before a show," he said. "I just simulate it by holding both hands closer. The only time I really ride one-handed is to show.

"Again, in the last months of training, up to time to show, I'm concentrating on fine-tuning and

'Fencing' Teaches Free Movement

Watching a group of reiners schooling or warming up their horses can be enlightening. It's common to see a rider running his or her horse directly toward a fence, then stopping. This is known as "fencing."

"Many people think of fencing as an exercise you do to emphasize stopping," said trainer Scott McCutcheon. "In my program, fencing is used to emphasize moving freely and to keep a horse from anticipating a stop."

This is important, because if a horse slows down when the rider asks for a stop, the animal cannot stop correctly.

"Stopping a horse is not like landing an airplane, where you reduce speed as you come to the stop," explained McCutcheon. "Instead, it's like landing a helicopter You keep flying at top speed until you get over the target, then say 'whoa.' To have the forward motion you need to slide, you have some speed going in to it.

"I start fencing a horse in about the fourth or fifth month of training, or whenever I begin to feel the horse anticipating the stop," McCutcheon explained. "I'll gallop him to the fence, making him move steadily and straight towards it until I ask him to stop."

The idea behind this technique is that the horse must go in a straight line, and he must run free through the middle of the arena.

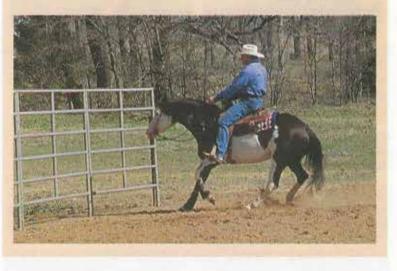

"To have good stops, the horse must be going forward," said McCutcheon. "The horse must be running free and not slow down when he sees the fence approaching.

"I don't drive my horses to the fence, and I don't expect them to run and slide into it. I just want them to learn to run up close to it. Reiner markers are always placed where you can run past the marker and still won't be crowding the fence.

"When we start fencing, the horse will duck and dive to the left and right and not want to run straight to the fence. We'll ask him to be straight and hold him steady. I won't ask him to stop until he'll run straight to the fence without breaking down or running to the right or left.

"In my workouts, if I do a lot of stops at three-quarters of the arena and the horse begins to anticipate, I'll ask him to move past there to the fence," McCutcheon continued. "I'll push him past where he wants to stop several times until he's free from fence to fence again. Then I'll stop at the three-quarters point again, or at the half-way point.

"I want him running free and not anticipating the stop."

Positioning the Rider's Body for the Stop

The position of the rider's body in the rundown to the stop is critical. The rider should have his or her body in position, sitting slightly back with chin up, driving the horse with lower leg from knee to calf. The rider should maintain that posture throughout the stop.

This posture keeps the rider from falling forward as the horse stops.

"All I do is say 'whoa,' then push my heels down," said McCutcheon. "That way the horse doesn't feel me prepare myself. He just hears 'whoa,' has an instant to get his body into position, then as I pick up on the reins that cue brings him on to a stop."

Most green riders make the mistake of leaning forward on the rundown, then leaning back to say whoa. Although that type of over-emphasis is fine for a green horse to warn him and cause him to be slowing down before the 'whoa' begins, in a finished horse it takes away the momentum in the stop.

Once the horse has stopped, the rider releases the pressure on the reins.

intensity. When I do go to a show, I want to continue to be very deliberate about how I work and school the horse."

At the Show

On site with a futurity horse, McCutcheon takes the animal into the arena to let him feel the ground.

"At the show, I want him to feel the ground, so I'll stop him four or five times, and no more," the trainer explained. "Then I'm finished and take him to the stall. I've done my homework; my horse already knows by the way I sit and the way I ride exactly what I'm asking him to do.

"With an older horse that's a big stopper, if you do your work right you don't even have to show them the ground," McCutcheon said. "Peppy Badger Chex and Dunnit Like A Cowboy won their AQHA World Championships without working on the ground first.

"I knew they were broke and trusted them to do their jobs, so I felt saving their strength was better than schooling them.

"A lot of people feel they have to drill the horse on stopping—over and over—at the show," McCutcheon said. "The two biggest rider errors I see in reining are overpreparing and nerves."

McCutcheon believes the two problems are related. The rider that overprepares the horse practices with him too much and makes him anticipate. He also wears the horse out with too many stops.

McCutcheon said a good example is the non-pro who gets to an event and sees the ground is awful.

"He is afraid his horse can't handle it, so he schools him over and over until he makes him so sore he sure can't handle it," McCutcheon said. "It would have been better to put the horse up and save his strength.

"Nerves sometimes make us do negative things," the trainer continued. "Riders get quick with their hands and cues when they're nervous, and this surprises the horse and doesn't allow him to stop like he can. You always need to ask a horse to stop exactly like you do at home." According to McCutcheon, if a horse that has been a good reining horse quits stopping, it's usually because something is wrong. The first thing the trainer does in this case is to have a veterinarian check the animal's hocks.

Usually a little rest will help. When an injury is suspected, the worst mistake is to try to force the horse to stop. Doing so can increase the severity or duration of the injury.

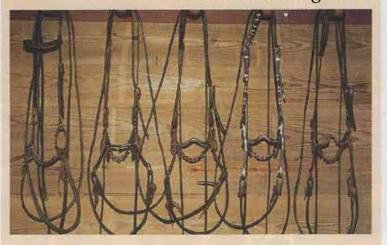

For the non-pro or novice horse that begins to lose his stop and has been checked to be sound, McCutcheon recommends serious evaluation. Prime suspects in a decline in performance are miscommunication, when the rider begins miscuing the horse, and inconsistency, when the rider does not cue the horse the same way every time.

"Most problems can be worked out with a little knowledge," McCutcheon said. "Don't hesitate to ask for help at any time.

"The more you know, the more you'll be able to correct little problems and keep your horse stopping consistently throughout his career."

Footwear For Reiners

Scott McCutcheon's Favorite Reining Bits

Although Scott McCutcheon's tack room contains a variety of bits, these are his most-used bits.

O-Ring Snaffle

This bit gives maximum lateral (side to side) control. It's a beginner bit for the horse and gives the rider "pull" from side to side to communicate clearly to the unschooled horse. Contact points are the sides of the mouth and over the tongue.

In the beginning, McCutcheon uses a smooth mouthpiece. As the horse becomes more adept at understanding the rider's cues, and McCutcheon needs less pull to cue him, he'll switch to a twisted wire mouthpiece. The irregular surface of this bit makes it easier for the horse to feel the pick-up.

The bit's contact points are the same, but the smaller mouthpiece and irregular surface make movement easier to feel.

Short Shank Snaffle

This bit introduces curb pressure behind the jaw, and the hinged center causes pressure on the outside of the bars. Now that the horse has become comfortable with the principle of pressure and release, this bit allows him to feel the release as the bit moves back into the hanging position after rider releases it—even during maneuvers.

Low Port and Grazing Port Bits

The low port bit is the first "nonbroken" or completely rigid bit introduced to the horse. The low port is a mild mouthpiece that applies bar pressure but relatively little tongue pressure, and no palate pressure.

In McCutcheon's program, most finished horses are ridden with this type of bit.

Medium Port

This bit also applies bar pressure, and palate pressure is increased with this medium port mouthpiece. There is still relatively little tongue pressure.

PAINT HORSE JOURNAL MAY 1997

"Sliders" or "sliding plates" are special shoes that allow reining horses to slide long distances. In the photo, notice the wide surface area and the length that supports the foot completely.

"We start riding our 2-yearolds in February or March, and ride them barefoot, with just regular trimmings, until August of that year," said McCutcheon. "Their feet are still growing, so I hate to shoe them before that if I don't have to.

"T normally put the sliding plates on in August. We'll shoe them with an inch-wide plate. I go right to the 'inchers.'

"My ground isn't so slick that it'll scare these horses, and this type shoe lets them slide on it at medium speed."

Ultimately, the reiner will wear the "inch-and-a-quarter plates" shown here.
